WIN AT BRIDGE

By Oswald Jacoby

Today's hand sprang from the fertile brain of Donald Parson and may be found in his book "Fall of the Cards".

Obviously, it never took place, but it does illustrate one important principle of dummy play. It is to try to find some combination of adverse cards that will allow you to make your contract.

Once East discards a club at trick one, it is not difficult for South to get a count on the trumps. West has all six of them. It is also reasonable to assume that East holds all nine clubs so that West started with six spades, three hearts and four diamonds. As a reader you can look see if you can figure out the way South took advantage of the favorable heart situation to make the slam.

He started out by drawing all West's trumps. He had to make five discards from dummy. Four were low diamonds. The other was the ace of clubs.

Then he started on hearts. Dummy's jack held the first heart trick and the king the next one. Then he led the deuce of clubs from dummy and while East made his king, he had to give South the last three tricks with the queen of clubs and the ace-nine of hearts.
