

We, the class of 1954, present our UNIVERSE, a world of whimsy and fantastic notions. A kind of never-never-land where stars are wished upon and dreams come true. The home of many orbits and the nurturing ground for the creation of man's imagination.

But our dreams must encounter reality. The greatest frontiers now beckon today's and tomorrow's pioneers of progress.

Where do we go from here? That depends on us.

In respect and admiration, we dedicate this 1954 Orbit to MISS MYRTLE ROBERTS because she is a fine teacher, the hub of the junior high, and has made the Junior Historians one of our most active and outstanding organizations.

A black and white photograph of a classroom scene. In the background, a teacher in a suit stands near a large window with multiple panes. Several students are seated at their desks, which have attached writing surfaces. The students are dressed in mid-20th-century attire. The foreground shows the backs and sides of several students, including one in a floral shirt. The overall atmosphere is that of a formal classroom setting.

THE GREATEST MAN IN SKEETERVILLE

It was many years ago in Skeeterville that Slicker Deemey was buried. It was hot in the swamp country that day, and only morbid curiosity drew the lumbering bodies of the swamp people over the hill from town to the burial plot. Everyone knew about Slicker's past, how he had shot Raff Emory twenty years ago and had ever since lived in a hermit shack deep in the bayou.

Only one person lingered at the grave that day. Ola Emory, Raff's daughter, stood in the gloom, staring intently at the rich, black upturned earth. Dusk settled a cloak over her. Still she didn't move. Perhaps she felt revenge--perhaps remorse for the man who lay buried beneath her feet. It is hard to determine, for she was a swamp woman--a silent woman.

It was late and dark when Ola left the burial ground. She picked her way through the maze of foliage as if in a trance. Perhaps that is why she forgot about the pool of quicksand that lay beneath a pair of ancient trees. Her body entered the sludge easily despite her many frantic efforts and rasping screams. Frightened herons left their homes and skidded crazily over the water. Tiny animals fled in terror, so great was Ola's voice. Townspeople heard her and rushed off in her direction of her calls for help. Their usually stupid minds sprung alive as they remembered the quicksand. Through the thick brush they pushed and crawled in an effort to be the first to reach her. The screams had suddenly died away.

Then they found her. She sat on the long grass next to the quicksand. Her glassy eyes were fixed on the trail leading back to the burial plot. Looking in that direction the men saw him, Slicker Deemey, drifting over a half hidden pond and smiling fondly at Ola.

"He saved me," she said. "He just came and pulled me out."

Bodies became frozen as Slicker Deemey returned to his silent resting place.

THE WHITE CAT

There was nothing unusual about the night, except for the big blank-looking moon leering over the soldier-like row of poplar trees. A lonely howling wind blew like a big leather-belt with a bridge for a buckle. The first snow of the season was sifting lightly over the countryside.

Suddenly, across the bridge, a car came gliding and pulled to a stop a few feet from the poplars. Two men got out.

"Joe, you think this place will be okay?"

"Ja, sure, Pete. There isn't a house in miles." The tall one pulled a cigarette out of a silver case and lit it. "And don't be so nervous. You act like you've never done this before. Now get the trunk open and bring it out. I'll watch for cars."

The smaller of the two nervously tugged at the trunk handle. Finally it flew open. "Yo. . . You better come and help me. She--I mean, it is kinda heavy."

Joe flicked the cigarette away and came around to the back of the car. "You stupid---"

Pete backed away from the upraised arm, "I think I hear something."

Joe stopped and listened for a moment, then he started to lift a big, burlap-wrapped bundle from the trunk. "Well, you gonna' stand there all night? Get over here and help me."

Pete jerkily leaped into action. They carried the bundle to the bridge and started to heave it over. Just as it leveled with the railing, a small, white, delicate hand slipped out of the fold of the burlap.

"You clumsy fool! Didn't I tell you to sew those seams up good?" Joe glared at Pete with menacing eyes. "Push that hand back in."

Pete pushed the hand in with a quick stroke and wiped his hand against his shiny serge suit. Then, together they pushed it over. In silence they watched it sink. Then Pete spoke, "I wonder where that little white cat of hers is?"

Joe laughed, "Ja, she always had that thing with her. Said she'd always be with it."

Pete thought a minute, then his face stiffened like a white clay mask. "Hey, didn't she say something once about her coming back as a white cat? Something to do with recarnation... recormation, or something like that."

Joe's fingers stopped momentarily from the lighting of a cigarette. "Reincarnation. She said that cat would get even with all the people she owed something." He laughed, but somehow the laugh wasn't natural. "So what, I don't believe it."

Pete moved toward the car, "Let's go, huh, Joe?"

Joe was willing to go. They started toward the car. As they neared it, they glanced around, then hastily stepped in. The car sped off much faster than it had come.

When the last sound of the motor died away, the night became still again. The moon was still blank-looking, and the wind was still blowing. The first snow of the season was still coming down, but just a little harder now.

Across the bridge a small object was moving. What was it?

Oh nothing, just a little white cat.

SANDY

I'LL ALWAYS REMEMBER

Others will soon forget him, but not I. Others will seek their own worldly pleasures, oblivious of the past, but I'll always remember.

He was more than just a man to me, yes, more than just a common person. He was more than just a teacher you take for granted. He was an individualist with life and meaning, personality, and ideals.

I first noticed him when I was in seventh grade. As an underclassman, I felt rather lost, but his friendly smile would give me confidence. As he collected tickets at the cafeteria, he would go out of his way to help me. Right then and there I decided that it would be wonderful to have him as a teacher.

A few years later, my wish came true. I clearly remember the first day I entered his class as a sophomore. The room was filled with the usual chatter on the opening day of school. When he entered, all became silent for we knew that this was a man of respect. Although we tried every trick in the book, he was forever patient. He never lost his temper, although it was tried many times.

When he explained something, it was in simple terms and we understood. We felt that we wanted to learn what he was teaching. Thus, for thirty-three years he had been teaching and influencing hundreds of students.

But most of all, I remember him for what he did after the dismissal bell. He was interested in us, and his spare time was spent in advancing our social activities.

I know I'll never forget his cheery nod and friendly smile. Yes, I'll always remember P. D. Joseph.

TAKE TEN EVERYBODY

For weeks the patrol that had been sent to scout the hills had gone without food and replacements. The tenseness was apparent and the men looked rugged. It was on a Sunday that we first saw Magario. It had taken the Sarge weeks to send replacements; twelve scared kids, one was Antonio Magario. He was about twenty and could speak very little English. He was Spanish. The first words he greeted us with were "We belong here, no?"

After weeks the hills were still crawling with the enemy. By this time Magario had mastered a slang expression. In the midst of fighting he would sing out, "Take ten everybody!" One day three guys, Johnson, Magario, and myself were sent to see how things looked. I motioned to our troop to advance. Then Magario shouted out "Take ten everybody!" Well, ammunition started flying, and men started falling. Magario was one of them. He was injured fatally but before he died he said, "Take ten everybody." This was more important to us than any speech we had ever heard.

PEACE

If everyone was kind and good,
If you and I did what we should,
The world would be a better place,
All men like brothers face to face.
If God would be the king,
I know that everything
Would be so calm and full of peace,
Wars and fighting would surely cease.

HUMOR

"I'LL BE DOWN TO GET YOU IN A SPACESHIP, HONEY!!!"

Assuming that dating is still as popular in five hundred years as it is today, we have tried to figure out what a typical Friday night will be like in an ordinary city on earth in the year 2454.

Joe dials his gal Sal's house on the telescreen to ask for a date.

Joe: Let's go swinging on a star, Venus!

Sal: O.K. Hercules, what's the dope?

Joe: Dad will let me have the new "Rocket 88" so we can go to the Military Ball up on Mars. He doesn't trust any old heap saucer out of the atmosphere-- it hasn't been hitting on all jets lately.

Sal: Galloping Galaxies! I forgot to pick up my dancing boots at the cobblers-- they're being re-magnetized. I can't possibly stay on the floor without them. Why don't we take in a "Fly-In" instead?

Joe: Swell idea! Just for laughs let's go to the Cloud-Burst Fly-In. They're showing one of those corny, outmoded 3-D movies---"I the Jury." It must be centuries old--my grandmother remembers seeing it on television when she was a little girl.

Sal: Love to! Those get ups they wore in those films give me a large charge.

Joe: Great! Pick you up in fifteen kiliotopes.

(Later in the rocket ship)

Sal: Hey! Moon Goon! Get with it! The Hep-Neptune Program" should be starting now.

ZZZWCHXXXACKEEE EO O O (Static)

Announcer: . . . and here are the top ten Hep-Neptunes of the weeks, kids, as indicated on the automatic coin machines throughout the Universe. . .

Tunes	Dedicated to
I See The Moon	C. A. P. on sky watch duty
Don't Let the Stars Get In Your Eyes	Sophomore Bachelor's Club Motto
Stranger In Paradise	Dan Scobie in all girl Spanish Class
Mica, Mica Parva Stella	First year Latin class

The World is Waiting for the Sunrise	Prom Trotters
Moonlight and Roses	Senior Boys' Tea
I've Got the World on a String	Tom Klug
Racing With the Moon	Bob Lunde
Oh Happy Day	Seniors on June 2, 1954

Announcer: Here's a news flash! The final election returns have been tallied from the Nov. 4 Universal Election. The top news is that Thomas E. Dewey after many unsuccessful attempts has won the race for Presidency. Other returns are as follows:*

"Miss Space of 4591"	Pat Behling
"Miss Smoking Rockets"	Judy Rudolf
"Miss Venus"	Carla Hobus
"Hercules"	Frank Luedtke
"The Man from Planet X"	Tom Lange
"Mr. and Mrs. Bright Star"	June Johannsen, Pete Thomas
"Mr. One-Way Ticket to Mars"	Mr. Bloor

Helen Jellyman and Glen Goecke were voted "nicest to be stranded with on the moon." Barb Swailes and Bob Schoenike were voted "best to go riding with in a red convertible flying saucer." "To Go Swinging on a Star With" it was Bruce Broede and, again, Barb Swailes.

Joe: Better turn off the inter-com 'cause we're coming in for a landing.

* elected in a poll of the senior class

CALENDAR

SEPTEMBER

- 3--Back again. A crow in Mr. Vinger's homeroom caused lots of excitement. It came in an open window and flew around, while girls screamed. Finally Erv came to the rescue.
- 7--Labor Day. No school. A vacation so soon?
- 11--Everyone could be found at the football game cheering for the team. We tied Stoughton 7-7.
- 18--This game was out of town, but the score was still a tie, 13-13.
- 19--The team members wonder if they could make an all tie season.
- 21--Judy Rudolf leaving smelly chemistry room after experiment, "Ah, fresh air."
- Mr. James, "Someday I'll come over to your house and say that."
- 23--Cecil Granger fell asleep in Problems. When Cecil awoke, Mr. Bloor said, "I'm glad to see you're back with us."
- During the assembly Dot. O. had her head in front of the movie projector. The speaker said, "A pretty blonde would be O. K. under other circumstances."
- 25--Seniors voted for fire chief and queen in homeroom. Gen. Herreid received one vote in Mrs. Herrmann's homeroom.
- 28--Mr. Pippert tried out for B squad cheerleading. He did a flip as a climax.
- 29--Carla H. and Barb C. had a little trouble with their chemistry experiment. The test tube burned, the cork blew out. Ooh, that was messy.

OCTOBER

- 1--No class has the school spirit of 5th hour gym. Today they serenaded the Problems class with "We Want a Touchdown."
- 2--Miss Beaver and Miss Dam were the hit of the pep meeting. Fire Chief Cecil G. arrived on the scene in Local 15 pushed by Fire Queen June J.
- 5--The school is talking about the Sprinter. Seems it was tarred and feathered Friday night.
- 12--Mary H. is waving a boy's class ring in everyone's face. Not everyone goes steady after one date.
- 14--Homecoming Parade tonight. Senior float won first place. "Da-Da-Dum-Da."
- 16--Homecoming was perfect. We won, 13-0.
- 21--Mr. Bloor told all his classes that he won't be available after school tomorrow when report cards come out.
- 22--After seeing Mr. Hinterberg, three senior girls decided not to skip school again even if they have a lot of Orbit work to do.
- 23--Mr. James had said he would set up a still, it wasn't up.
- Tom Huber said, "I even brought my little cup."

NOVEMBER

- 3--Rubinoff gave the high school a short preview of his evening concert. Included were "Hot Canary," "Dragnet," and "Don't Fence Me In."
- 19--When the orchestra played "Ruben Ruben" in study hall, Mr. Stamstad asked what it was. Mary K. said, "Peter, Peter, Pumpkin Eater." Mr. Stamstad asked Peder T. why he was so red.

DECEMBER

- 2--The Mixed Chorus went to Beloit to see Fred Waring. On the way home Mr. Stamstad was delayed by a speeding ticket.
- 11--At the Christmas Dance Jack E. had to turn his T-shirt around so the "Kern's" wouldn't show.
- 15--Who were the four mysterious boys that gave all that wonderful advice to the Girl's Club?

JANUARY

- 13--Kathy B. had hiccups during Spanish. Mrs. Herrmann asked if she wanted to go get a drink. She said no. Marian S. offered to get the drink for her.
- 15--Mr. Thompson walked into Prep class with his overcoat on and reading a book. He got part way in, looked up, said "Wrong class," and left.
- 29--Senior High Sadie Hawkins Day. The girls in feed sacks were the main feature.

FEBRUARY

- 3--Menominee Falls' band gave an assembly. The senior boys enjoyed the Can-Can dancers.
- 5--Mr. Bloor told the 2nd period class about his new demerit system.
Jerry M. "Dictator."
- 16--Mr. Bloor handed paper to everyone in the 6th period Problems class. He asked them to tear it up and throw it on the floor.
Tom K. had to stay after class and pick it all up.
- 17--The senior girls learn a lot of different things in Home Economics. Today some of them took the table apart.
- 23--Tom Lange insists on wearing his rubbers during play practice. They keep his feet dry when he has to dive into the swimming pool, so he says.
- 24--If any one sees a lobe running around, please return to a senior girl. (Plural, lloobbllee.)
- 25--Did you know that Mr. Herreid is taking vocal lessons? If you hear strains of the latest hit streaming thru the halls, it's probably coming from his equipment room where it's rumored that he practices.
