Dedication

We appreciate the long hours of work which the Parents Music Club contributes for the benefit of the entire student body.

By selling refreshments at games and dances, they have been able to provide uniforms for all music organizations, sponsor the Music Festival, and send groups on trips.

By vote of the Senior Class of 1955, we dedicate this Orbit to the--

Nothing Ever Happened There

Jim Krier

It was an average day in Mayville. Dead quiet hung over the town and one could see it almost as plainly as the fog that formed a grey cape over the peaceful little village. Every day was average in Mayville; nothing ever happened there.

The wind that blew off the sea from the east played games with the lazy leaves that lay resting on the hard ground.

It was Sunday and most of the folks in town were resting, too, after eating the Noonday meal. Every now and then you could hear shotgun fire from down at Connor's Marsh.

The fog had by now cleared away and it revealed the brilliant blue sky with a few dark clouds forming in the east. The playful wind that had been so gentle before was now starting to blow harder. No one took heed of nature's warning, and no one stirred just because they heard the wind whistling through the trees.

Far off in the distance a great black cloud hung in suspended animation, suddenly releasing itself from the grip of the sky and moving swiftly towards the small town, the small quiet town.

As the cloud approached, no one could see a long narrow funnel extending from the lip of the great black monster. The tornado cloud rushed at the small town, hitting it with the impact of a bolt of lightning. The wind tore apart the small insignificant collection of small homes and people and threw it helplessly against the walls of the watching sky.

The monster was quick in its work and soon traveled off, leaving only a cloud of dust and a pile of rubble where once had been the makings of mighty men.

Mighty, such a word is deserved only by the forces of good and evil, God and the devil, and by the kindness and the cruelty of nature.

It was an average fall day in Mayville. Dead quiet hung over the town and one could see it almost as plainly as the fog that formed a grey cape over the peaceful little village. Every day was average in Mayville; nothing ever happened there.

The Brave

Sandy Reinhard

The odds were against us; we were out numbered ten to one. There were only ten fellows left from our squadron, ten of us against one hundred communists. The advance began and before I knew what had happened, I blacked out.

They found me with one leg practically shredded to bits up to the knee and the other leg mangled and not clearly seen through all the blood and dirt. Yes, they found me, a soldier who had fought for his country, maybe a little hesitantly at times when advancing into enemy territory, but then most of the men in my battalion also hesitated as though frightened at going into the incampment of doom.

I keep telling myself that I really have it good - at least I won't have to be sent home in a casket to my family. Those poor guys that were blinded and shellshocked are the fellows who really are hard-off. What can they possibly do in this progressive nation.

As I lie in my hospital bed, I think over all these problems of the past and immediately get a bad taste in my mouth. Sure, I received a couple of medals, but then as I think I wonder if it was worth it all. Only the future will tell.

But now I am happy. The pain is almost gone, the war is over, the battle won and victory is sweet, knowing I helped to gain it. Tomorrow I'll be taken out of this room to receive my artificial legs. I am indeed fortunate that I can walk again.

M Day

Peter Huber

"Well, Kurt, what do you think of it?" inquired the short, beady-eyed man.

"It is the perfect place for our operations, Zorkov," replied the other, a big, husky man with cold, dark eyes and a sinister scar running the length of his cheek.

"Yes, yes," the other answered. "Our comrades will be pleased--for we have found just the right place. We can use that house on top of the cliff as our base. And, we can have a signal light which can be seen out on the sea for many miles."

"Hmm, yes," mused Kurt. "We will also have our men set up a short wave radio to keep in touch with our great leader. Ha, ha!--Won't the people of the United States be surprised when they discover the gift we are bringing them."

"We must work fast, Kurt," said Zorkov. "Our people are depending on us. 'M' Day will soon be here: The day we have all been waiting for--the one day that will make the people of the United States cringe in fear. Because we, we, the all-powerful Soviets have succeeded in printing Mad Comics in Russian!"

Willie's Week-End

Don Niemi

The train was slowing down as it approached the bustling city. Willie had never been here before. Why, who could tell what might happen in this town.

The train stopped, and Willie gracefully descended from the boxcar which had been his home for the past several hours. Willie had had a shave and a haircut as recently as this morning, when the jailer had given him one. It was important that he look proper when he went to pick up his new clothes won with the raffle ticket he found in jail. He looked like a happy young college student. Of course, he still was very young for one in his profession.

Willie walked with a dignified air to the station nearby, where an atmosphere of excitement prevailed. He mixed with the crowd of students who had gathered after descending from a newly-arrived train. As he wandered around the station, Willie gave an approving glance at a cute co-ed. Such beauty surprised him. But even greater was his amazement when she turned to him and said, "Why, you must be my date for the week-end. You're even cuter than your picture."

"Well--" feeling a hand on his shoulder, Willie turned, expecting some Goliath who was her real date. Instead, it was a man with a microphone.

"Good day, sir," remarked the announcer. "We've been trying to give away some cash prizes on our gala broadcast honoring State's homecoming. Now tell me, sir, how many bars are there on a jail cell?"

"Oh, I'd guess about sixteen," answered the surprised Willie, knowing the number well.

"Splendid! And now, sir, listen to the prizes you have won. First, is two hundred fifty dollars in cash. And our sponsor, the Yellow Cab Company, has for you and the charming young lady at your side a pass entitling you to free transportation anywhere within a radius of twenty miles during the homecoming weekend. And, of course, here are two tickets for tomorrow afternoon's game."

"Why, thank you." And turning to the young lady at his side, he said, "As I started to say before, you're a real work of art."

"Thank you. Isn't this going to be a dreamy week-end?"

Humor-1955 Style

Well here I am, and there you are, and there's Mr. Hinterberg with his yardstick. Well, students, this is your old pal lonesome George, back again with our show. This week the George Gosling show is coming direct from WHS - to you.

Now you never can tell what is going to happen on our show that's what we strive for - originality. Just let me show you - step behind the curtains with me.

And here we are, right in the middle of the study hall. Now this here study hall is mighty strange. Just notice all the intellectual absorption. Absorption - that's a big word. You see, we like to increase your vocabulary on our show too.

Well, there's a nice little girl - Pat washed her hair just specially for me. And there's Little Harv with his radio - and Dot M. who still hasn't made up her mind about her chemistry class periods. There's Laura P., talking to a boy, of course, and Doris S. in a straight skirt. There's Pat I. who is trying to find a new excuse for gym, and Don Manthey who is resting up. Seems he had to walk a block to get to his car. And there's Leon Gans who is trying to talk someone into passing the wastebasket. You surely must notice all the diamond rings flashing. And all the clock watchers waiting for that bell to ring, and packing up their books beforehand. See Roger Theder studying with that big book; there's a comic book behind it. Everybody knows that. And you can't hardly get them kind no more.

Now just step behind the curtain with me into Room 205. Sniff... sniff... smells like chemistry lab. It is. See that jovial man with that acid eaten cloak? That's--well, everyone knows him. One of his favorite lines is "Grasp it gently but firmly and don't forget to hold your little pinky up." There's never a dull moment in his class.

For instance, just last fall someone by the name of Elroy had a very embarrassing moment. He had some hydrochloric acid, see? Mr. James said he should light it, and Elroy thought he said bite it, so he did. You want to know what happened? It bit him back.

I heard about another embarrassing moment. Some Watertown girl was at a home basketball game. Did you know that the visiting teams used the girls' locker room? She didn't.

"Hi ya iddy biddy buddy!"

"Now who are you?"

"Why I'm your roving reporter Headline Hoffer with a news flash. Election returns have just come in from the Senior Class. Can I give them?"

"Sure you can."

First of all we have Bert Kuptz named as the person most likely to be President of the U. S. A., Bob Lunde is the one most likely to retire on a rich country estate, and Pat I. is the one most likely to win an argument with Mr. Bloor."

"Thank you, Headline." Now here's a joke I heard while waddling to the studio: What is in the water but isn't wet? Give up? A reflection!

Our scene then shifts to advanced math class where Birch and the teacher are arguing some finer point again. Just the other day the teacher asked the class to name two objects which always remain constant. Jim Raue promptly replied, "Pints and quarts."

"Omnia Gallia in tres partes divisa est--" This is Latin class, no doubt. The pupils are discouraged because the teacher still hasn't started her hot-rod club. When asked what the greatest accomplishment of the Romans was, Joe C. replied, "Learning Latin!"

In Room 206, the Seniors are busily reading their Practical English Magazines. (The jokes are good.) Of course, they have now joined the crowd of those who wrote Macbeth and Somerset Maugham. Mr. Chady and Mr. Huber are now learned authorities on Shakespeare.

Those energetic tappings you hear come from the typing room. "Keep your eyes on the copy-keep your eyes on the copy-keep your eyes on the copy keep--" That? Oh, that's the teacher. After weeks of 10 errors a minute, the kids have those time writing blues.

The jingle of money comes from American problems class where all the rich farmers are gathered. Of course, only half the class is there-the band members have been excused for a rally. On Fridays 160 Seniors wonder why bulletin boards were ever invented. Mr. Bloor has acquired a new citizenship poster - at least, until his door is repainted. He's been having trouble with the chemistry students who peek in. The other day Mr. Bloor asked Lois K. if she practiced her bassoon - seems he heard some funny noises next door.

Speaking of music (and I was) I can't the musical groups here. For a while last if the band members were going to starve - late to dinner. Romance must go on, even pecially when the horn and trombone sec- each other. Poor Ellward! He was so couldn't play a bell-tone. "Now that you're playing the notes, Let's play the music." Sounds familiar - must be the director. If it isn't "them Bases" giving him trouble, it's the trumpet section. Oh yes, there's also the orchestra which does a fine job, in spite of the fact that the concert master always chews gum. The orchestra recently voted to have microphones installed on the cellos, so their solos can be heard. It's been a big secret, but ever since the band sang at one of the concerts, the Mixed Chorus has been wor- cause of their "man Ever since the boys and the girls (2 to 1 ratio) started doing their lab. experiments together, science has been advanced. As the teacher rises to say those famous last words, "Your assignment for tomorrow is-", I can see by the little clock on the wall that it's time to go.

So that was WHS? Well, I'll be a dirty bird!!!

Which all leads us to the question of the week: Do two squares going steady make an octagon? For the answer to this and other questions, tune in again to the George Gosling show.

Meanwhile, this is your old pal, lonesome George saying,

October 4- Mrs. Reinhardt's fifth period Art class was being given lessons in the gambling and roulette wheels. We must change the name of the class from Art II to the Art of gambling.

October 6- Mr. Bloor and Mary Lou H. should start a debate club. Their problem, of course, the farm problem.

October 14- Crowd gathers around bonfire for pep rally before Homecoming game.

October 20- Al Worden invented a new formula in Algebra, YRU2?

October 22- A few snickers were heard as Mr. Bloor's problems classes noticed his haircut. Tom Hargraves said, "It looks like a lawn mower went through it." Was it really that bad, Mr. Bloor?

October 25- Senior play rehearsal, "Bill, you better not use the word, HELL, it might get written up in the papers." "Can you think of any better way to get publicity, Miss Skinner?"

October 27- Democratic propaganda clippings were put up on Mr. Bloor's wall. Now, who could have put them up behind a GOP'S back?

November 12- Junior High party. Lots and lots of balloons.

November 13- Alice A. had to watch an experiment on the window sill for Mr. James. When asked what was happening she replied, "A few cars are going by."

November 18- We beat our old rivals, Oconomowoc 61-46. A victory in more ways than one eh, senior girls?

November 20- CRASH! "Oh, no" yells Janet B. as her beads broke again.

November 23- Mr. Bloor did his good deed for the day with a sign which read: "Please be quiet and let Mr. Fritz sleep." As Blake was peacefully sleeping in problems class.

Baseball Crown

Beats Cuba City,
11-1, to Annex
First State Honors

Dedication

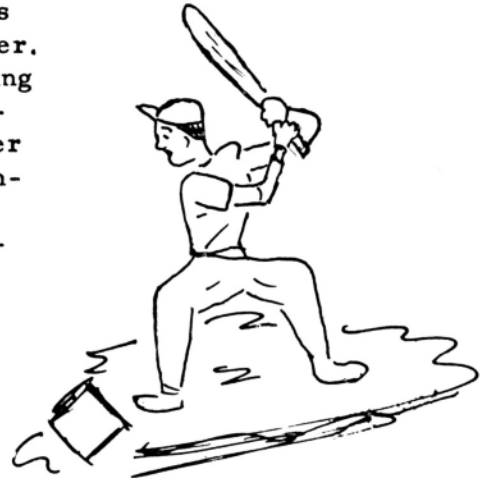

TO THE VICTORS

1955 STATE BASEBALL CHAMPS

Our high-spirited baseball team took the State Championship by winning nine straight games in tournament play. The three deciding games were played at Menasha, Wis. The first game was played against Hurley. The score was 6-0, and Ken Rose pitched a one-hitter. In the second game, really the deciding game, Watertown played and beat undefeated Edgerton, 2-1. Roger Theder drove in the winning run. In the championship game, Watertown beat Cuba City, 11-1 behind the excellent pitching of Bill Crupi. AS A SALUTE TO OUR TEAM, WHO ARE CHAMPS IN EVERY SENSE OF THE WORD, WE PROUDLY DEDICATE THIS 1955 ORBIT SUPPLEMENT.
